Voluntary Cooperation In a Crisis

The fuel crisis is genuine. We are in a real emergency. This is one of the sternest challenges to individuals and collective responsibility on the home front which has come out of the war so far.

Our collective responsibility will be handled by the various agencies of government and business which are directly concerned. The solid fuels administration has declared an emergency and initiated action. The needs it has proclaimed will be acted on promptly by the various organizations prepared to make collective decisions. There is no special problem in that category. What needs to be done there will be done by collective decision and action. Schools and public buildings, theaters and other places of amusement can be regulated by central authority and their own organizations and associations.

Cooperation on the part of individuals and small groups acting independently, on the other hand, can be assured only by awareness of the crisis and determination to deal with it conscientiously. Thousands of us are entirely on our own in this matter. Conscience is our only guide. While the thing being asked of us is not great—merely the temporary sacrifice of a little convenience to avert widespread suffering, perhaps even a disaster unless the weather turns warmer in the next few days—it is tremendously important.

Fuel on hand must be stretched to the limit. There must be no waste. There must be no hair-splitting between what we want to do and what needs to be done. This is an emergency. No one can be blamed for it. It might have happened even without the added complications of war, but those complications have been added. They must be dealt with just as though the fuel crisis was a crisis in battle. This is not something to be turned over to the other fellow to worry about. It is the responsibility of each individual. Decide what you can do to save fuel—then do it without any delay.

Psychology of Attack

Increasing evidence of preparations for offensive Allied action on the western front, apparently in the Cologne area, has been noticed by the Germans and tacitly admitted by the Allies.

The psychology of attack is not a thing to be judged at long distance, but it would be strange if sensational gains by the attacking Russians in the east had not illuminated some previously obscure possibilities in the west. Von Rundstedt's surprise in the Ardennes sector may have unbalanced Allied strategy on the western front, but now that it has been discounted the Germans may be the ultimate victims of the upset in the time-table.

Certainly it is reasonable to suppose that the Russian drive has been an inspiration to the Allies in the west. They have been given not only an added incentive, but the benefit of release from the maximum pressure they were confronted with when the eastern front was comparatively quiet. If the Russian offensive continues to roll westward—and if in the next few days the Allies in the west reveal that they have recovered sufficiently from last month's blow to undertake a major renewal of their drive to the east—the war in Europe will take on a shape that seemed impossible at the beginning of January.

The Necessity of Baseball

The sentimental tears over the prospect that major league baseball may be unable to carry on in 1945 minus the 4-F's who were its mainstay last season probably will have no more bearing on the ultimate decision than they have had in a thousand cases where the loss of manpower threatened to interfere with business as usual.

Ultimately, the businessmen who run ball clubs will decide whether they can operate them with the manpower available in such a manner as not to make a joke of the major leagues and a shambles of their important equities in the national pastime. When the showdown comes, the necessity of baseball as a builder and sustainer of morale and the warm place reserved for it in the hearts of all good and true Americans will have about as much to do with the decision as the necessity of the neighborhood stores which have been put out of business because the sterling characters who made them a rallying point for camaraderie and neighborhood convenience went away to the wars and couldn't be replaced.

Baseball played without baseball players would bear only an accidental resemblance to the thing sentimentalists talk about when they insist the five old game must go on, war or no war, players or no players.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

Recapture of Clark field on Luzon, the most extensive aerial installations west of the Hawaiian Islands, is a source of special satisfaction to Gen. MacArthur and every military official in a position of responsibility when Japan attacked the United States.

Theoretically, at the close of 1941, Clark field was the key to United States aerial power in the western Pacific. Actually, it was an invitation to the Japanese to take advantage of American unpreparedness. Most of the equipment it contained was wiped out before it could be used. While the catastrophe was secondary to the dramatic attack at Pearl Harbor, or seemed so at the time, it destroyed the most potent striking power within reach of the Japanese in the early days of the war. A measure of that power's importance is furnished now in the prospect that Clark field will provide the major base for air power's part in sealing off Japan's supply line to the East Indies.

States troops are recovering ground and installations which were part of the American organization of defense in 1941.

Jonas Goodman and daughter, Celesta, of W. Main st., spent Wednesday with Jacob Dustman at Patmos.

Complaints made to city authorities indicate that some persons are responsible for wholesale poisoning of homeless dogs in the city.

Twenty Years Ago

A tuberculosis clinic will be conducted in Salem the next few weeks as part of the district health program as announced by Dr. T. T. Church, district and Salem city health commissioner.

The senate foreign relations committee today again considered proposals for American entrance into the World court.

Salem suffered its coldest night of the winter Tuesday when the mercury went to 10 below zero.

The body of Judge Byron S. Ambler will arrive in Salem Friday morning, according to word received by relatives.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, January 30.

JUDGING by the lunar and mutual aspects there may be a condition of the irregular, exciting and unpredictable, with sudden upheavals, disruption and annoyance. These may unhappily affect not only business relations, but as well romantic and domestic or social associations, causing much deep-rooted unrest and distress. However, there is a serious state of mind, with vision to avert definite break, by patience, fortitude and calm attitudes. Should arguments, quarrels and rancor be indulged, there may be lasting regrets. With calm and restraint, analyzing beneath the superficial, there are signs of peaceful culminations.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which some disrupting and disintegrating undercurrents threaten to bring misery, misunderstanding, friction into the affairs, business, social and affectional, of far-reaching reactions on the future. However, the menace is not one that may not be quashed by calm, poised, friendly and considerate conduct, while arguments, quarrels and enmity might have regrettable and enduring estrangements. Careful analysis of disturbing factors should assist to wise conclusions and peace.

A child born on this day, while having a deep and profound nature, with much sterling worth, may be easily swayed by erratic and turbulent emotional impulses.

Personal Appearances

It has been suggested that actors in New York plays work at a war job four hours a day in addition to their theatrical chores.

This raises several questions. Is the theater essential or non-essential? How much do actors contribute to morale? Would such a move mean a curtailment of the U.S.O. camp shows? And would the government prefer an actor's half-day output to his performance in the combat area?

None of these questions can be answered now. But the suggestion itself offers a pleasant possibility. It might bring more workers into essential industry. We can imagine girls fighting for the chance to work beside a glamorous actor on the production line. And how about all those disappointed seekers of tickets to "Oklahoma"? They might take a war job just to see a member of the cast.

Congressman Carl Vinson wants to hike the President's salary by $25,000 because it is now "less than the income of Frank Sinatra".

Well, maybe Mr. Roosevelt doesn't have the best paying job in the country. But as he heads into his fourth term, it certainly looks like good, steady work.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Some Facts About Endocrine Glands

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

ONE of the most active fields of medical study and interest in the past quarter of a century has been that of the ductless, or endocrine glands. The small masses of glandular tissue scattered over the body and discharging their secretions directly into the blood stream were found to influence growth, weight, nutrition and reproductive functions and, by implication, personality, mental life and many other not readily definable aspects of health and happiness.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The public was as charged as the medical profession with the possibilities and even more glibly in their willingness to take "shots" designed to improve the character, complexion and social graces.

Lapses Too High

Undoubtedly, in many instances, they got their hopes too high and as a natural consequence there has been a reaction of disappointment and skepticism about these wonder working extracts.

Someone asked me the other day along these lines whether there were any solid objective methods of examining a person to see whether any disturbance of the endocrines existed. He was under the impression that doctors just sort of guessed that because this person was too stout or too short or a little eccentric that this or that endocrine extract would fix him up so he tried two or three in a highly experimental mood.

The question has a good deal of point and deserves an answer. If the enthusiastic layman, beguiled by endocrine fairy tales, had looked in one of the more conservative medical treatises on the subject, he would have found statements for which proof can be adduced, and quite a dearth of the wishful thinking about the effects of endocrines that characterizes some of the "popular" pronouncements.

Endocrine Disorder Rare

In the first place, endocrine disorder is fairly rare. The only common ones are diabetes and disturbances of the thyroid gland. The idea that everyone or even 50 per cent of the population is somewhat unbalanced this way is pure fancy.

One of the really scientific practitioners of endocrinology known to me makes the following routine examinations on every suspected case:

1. Anthropometry—measurement of height, span of arms, comparison of upper and lower body segments, and weight.

2. Fat distribution, or type of leanness.

3. Basal metabolism—this is a measurement of oxygen consumption, and indicates whether nutrition is going at a fast or slow rate.

4. Blood sedimentation test.

5. X-ray studies of the bones of the wrist and ankle. Often the whole skeleton is X-rayed. Study of these plates indicate better than anything else whether growth is proceeding according to schedule. They are, of course, most valuable in children.

6. Chemical and blood tests. (1) Blood cholesterol, (2) forty-eight hour creatine excretion tests, (3) glucose tolerance test, (4) blood calcium.

Exact Measurements

You don't have to know what all these mean. I put them down simply to give the impression that they are exact measurements, carried out in a chemical laboratory and hence not influenced by the unrestrained imaginings of the examiner.

There is no place here for the record of personality deviations, abnormalities of reproductive functions or mental activity. These still remain to the examiner's opinion. But in most instances, if there is anything wrong in these departments which is due to endocrine disturbance, the objective tests as given above will show some change and it is found in practice safe to stick to them for the determination of a final judgment.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

P. H.: I have for years had a painful lump in my breast. Can that be cancer? What shall I do?

Answer: I am assured that you have an adequate and active Cancer Control Committee in your city. Surely you can get in touch with them, if by no other way through your newspaper. They will advise you whether cancer is or is not present.

T. M. H.: Is vitamin D, 50,000 units a day, all right to take for arthritis?

Answer: I never knew it to do one bit of good. Gold chloride treatments are better.

I. Y.:—Is it unhealthful to keep growing plants in a bedroom? I have been told they absorb the oxygen at night.

Answer:—That is just what they don't do. They give off oxygen. Goldfish can't live in a bowl without moss, and human beings can't live in a world without vegetation. But plants may bother sleepers in a bedroom because of the odor.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendenning has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Some Facts About Endocrine Glands

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

ONE of the most active fields of medical study and interest in the past quarter of a century has been that of the ductless, or endocrine glands. The small masses of glandular tissue scattered over the body and discharging their secretions directly into the blood stream, were found to influence growth, weight, nutrition and reproductive functions, and, by implication, personality, mental life and many other not readily definable aspects of health and happiness.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The public was as charged as the medical profession with the possibilities and even more gullible in their willingness to take "shots" designed to improve the character, complexion and social graces.

Undoubtedly, in many instances, they got their hopes too high and as a natural consequence there has been a reaction of disappointment and skepticism about these wonder-working extracts.

Someone asked me the other day along these lines whether there were any solid objective methods of examining a person to see whether any disturbance of the endocrines existed. He was under the impression that doctors just sort of guessed that because this person was too stout or too short or a little eccentric that this or that endocrine extract would fix him up so he tried two or three in a highly experimental mood.

The question has a good deal of point and deserves an answer. If the enthusiastic layman, beguiled by endocrine fairy tales, had looked in one of the more conservative medical treatises on the subject, he would have found statements for which proof can be adduced, and quite a dearth of the wishful thinking about the effects of endocrines that characterizes some of the "popular" pronouncements.

Endocrine Disorder Rare
In the first place, endocrine disorder is fairly rare. The only common ones are diabetes and disturbances of the thyroid gland. The idea that everyone or even 50 per cent of the population is somewhat unbalanced this way is pure fancy.

One of the really scientific practitioners of endocrinology known to me makes the following routine examinations on every suspected case:

1. Anthropometry—measurement of height, span of arms, comparison of upper and lower body segments, and weight.
2. Fat distribution, or type of leanness.
3. Basal metabolism—this is a measurement of oxygen consumption, and indicates whether nutrition is going at a fast or slow rate.
4. Blood sedimentation test.
5. X-ray studies of the bones of the wrist and ankle. Often the whole skeleton is X-rayed. Study of these plates indicate better than anything else whether growth is proceeding according to schedule. They are, of course, most valuable in children.

6. Chemical and blood tests. (1) Blood cholesterol, (2) forty-eight hour creatine excretion tests, (3) glucose tolerance test, (4) blood calcium.

Exact Measurements
You don't have to know what all these mean. I put them down simply to give the impression that they are exact measurements, carried out in a chemical laboratory and hence not influenced by the unrestrained imaginings of the examiner.

There is no place here for the record of personality deviations, abnormalities of reproductive functions or mental activity. These still remain to the examiner's opinion. But in most instances, if there is anything wrong in these departments which is due to endocrine disturbance, the objective tests as given above will show some change and it is found in practice safe to stick to them for the determination of a final judgment.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

P. H.: I have for years had a painful lump in my breast. Can that be cancer? What shall I do?
Answer: I am assured that you have an adequate and active Cancer Control Committee in your city. Surely you can get in touch with them, if by no other way through your newspaper. They will advise you whether cancer is or is not present.

T. M. H.: Is vitamin D, 50,000 units a day, all right to take for arthritis?
Answer: I never knew it to do one bit of good. Gold chloride treatments are better.

I. Y.: Is it unhealthful to keep growing plants in a bedroom? I have been told they absorb the oxygen at night.

Answer: That is just what they don't do. They give off oxygen. Goldfish can't live in a bowl without moss, and human beings can't live in a world without vegetation. But plants may bother sleepers in a bedroom because of the odor.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. ### Periodic Inspections Are Urged by Hine Garage

If you are a war worker, hauling tires, remember it's your responsibility to keep your car in good running condition.

As a Ford agency it's our responsibility to have trained mechanics and to be able to supply genuine factory parts for all makes of cars states H. I. Hine of the Hine Motor Co. W. State st.

Because the need for transportation is so urgent few garages find it necessary to worry about getting business. It's a case of encouraging motorists to do what they should to keep their cars going, using as little time of the mechanics as possible. Hine believes that the cheapest way for any motorist is to have regular inspections made.

An inspection by a competent mechanic, reveals, before real damage takes place the many conditions that constantly develop with any automobile. And as a rule the expense and time required to make the minor repairs or adjustments is very little, while even a few days' delay results in expensive replacement parts and much more of the mechanic's time.

Realign Your Automobile Wheels At Klein Garage

Most motorists know that during cold weather few tires blow out because the tires heat much less during cold weather.

Many, however, overlook the fact that right now if they are careless in keeping tires correctly inflated they are setting the stage for trouble mightily soon after hot weather arrives.

Taking care of tires every day is the only way to get the full mileage tult into them. Now that thousands of tires have been recapped or retreaded extra attention must be given. The retreading or even repairing of any kind of a casing is almost certain to cause it to be out of balance and if it is out of balance you may be certain it is wearing very fast.

To know that all wheels are in correct balance is the only way to get full mileage. This can be done with very little trouble in the Salem district. Matt Klein, who operates a specialized garage at 813 Newgarden st., has two special machines that tell to the smallest degree if the wheel is out of balance.

Flowers Are Ideal Gift For the Sick, Shut-Ins

Remembering the sick, shut-in, and the aged has always been a pleasure to most of us.

The little attentions given the unfortunate surely do repay the giver. To know others are wishing you well helps the sick to fight their ailment, it gives strength and brushes away loneliness.

Flowers have for centuries been an accepted medium for all occasions.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Danielle tossed her head. "Maybe—that's what I want to make! Nobody in this world has spared my feelings! Or my mother's—"

"You don't blame me for what my father did?"

"I'm bored. I've been engaged over and over—and I never loved one of them. Nobody worries about my feelings. Danielle can take care of herself! That's how they think."

"You certainly never were—there was a trace of humor in his voice—'exactly a dependent dame.'"

"No. Now look at me! I'm almost twenty-eight. It seems that I can't have affection. Men get scared of me. When I was a kid—I always imagined a man would come along who would tell me what to do and where to get off. Nobody did. Nobody can. I've been gypped. Maybe I'm not meant for affection. But I certainly think I'm entitled to excitement—anyhow. Fun. I used to think you were pretty swell—when you played football—and later. If having fun means trouble for people—then, there's going to be trouble!"

"A nice, wholesome attitude."

"And it's just the beginning! I'm going to wreck homes and influence people—for the worse. Indian Stones is a monument to hypocrisy. One more generation, and everybody in it will be as dead and dried up as Aggie Plum!"

There was a great deal more of that sort of conversation.

The sun settled behind the hills that rimmed Indian Stones and its two lakes. Sixty-five passed—and seven. The two people were so engrossed that Aggie was able to move closer and to part the branches in order to look at them. A reddish glint of sunset shone on Danielle's smooth hair and silhouetted her vivid profile. It illuminated Bill Calder, lounging against a boulder, downcast, tormented. Aggie felt sorry for him; what the girl was doing seemed coldly deliberate. As if she were merely trying to keep him there as long as possible. That thought became so clear to Aggie that he wondered what it could mean. At last, however, Bill tore himself away and hurried down the trail.

Again, Aggie slipped into the woods and started back by a straighter, shorter route. He was determined to reach the club ahead of them. He took a series of steep rock ledges with the facility of a chamois. He hurried along under a growth of white pines. In his brain, recollection unfolded a map imprinted during his youth. There would be a brook with easy going for a while. Then a cut through a narrow burned area to another old road which would come out behind the Botton place.

He followed a track of grass bleached by shade—a remnant from the time when the road had been more open. Then he plunged into a dense thicket—and stopped just before he emerged on the other side.

He looked at the ground. What held his attention would have terrified most persons, in that gray and silent place. But Aggie was not in the least frightened. Startled—and no more. He pursed his lips and whistled one low, soft note.

Two logs lay across the vestigial road—one on top of the other. Long, vertical stakes held them together—stakes that had guided the upper log to drop on the lower. Beyond the logs lay trigger, lever and baid—bread and honey, in this case. There were ants busy now in the honey. It was a deadfall—a big one—of a size suitable for bear. But the top log had closed, like the blade of a giant scissors, on a man. The man was Jim Calder.

There was nothing new about the spectacle of death for Aggie Plum. In his researches among the ruins of many civilizations, he'd seen the remains of myriad deaths, violent and peaceful. In his association with primitive people, he had seen death under circumstances which most of the members of the Indian Stones Country Club would have found insupportable. A social misfit, a wallflower, he was nevertheless no sissy.

He turned briefly to work out an explanation for the presence of the dead man in the trap. Calder had been coming in the same direction as Aggie. His footprints were there to show it—dim depressions, recent small disturbances. He'd ducked low in the tangle to avoid some festoons of bull brier. He'd stepped toward the bottom log—with the intention of going over it—and accidentally hit the trigger. Or, Perhaps, he'd pulled at the bread and honey out of curiosity—not noticing the other log poised above his head. It could have been either way.

Aggie took a careful route to examine the man. There was no doubt that he had been dead for some time. The blood, at the base of the shattered skull, was dry and dark. Broken-off leaves were not just wilted but curled by the day's heat. There was evidence of reflex kicking around the man's feet. And—Aggie checked back a few paces—the man had been alone. He made a search next for the knife that had pinned Bogarty's card to Sarah's front door. It was not there.

He then inspected the deadfall itself. When he had finished, he whistled again, bemusedly. It was a pretty crude job. Correct in principle, but not expert. Too much friction in the trigger. Calder, to have set it off upon himself, must have yanked hard—or lunged into it. The bear for which it had been intended would in all probability have robbed it safely without causing it to drop. Aggie wondered about the bear. He had not been noticing things especially as he had walked along; his mind had been occupied. But now he went back to the brook and skirted it. He satisfied himself presently. There were at least two bears in that part of the mountain. Bears had been scarce during his boyhood. They were coming back—and some contemporary youngsters, probably, had undertaken to catch one of them.

Aggie returned and knelt in order further to study the victim. He noticed one other thing. The man had, on the back of his left hand, the marks of a dog's teeth. Aggie did not touch the body. It was beginning to get dark in earnest. He straightened up—and heard a cracking in the woods. The noise was faint and it was made by a person. He hurried toward it.

Through an avenue of tree boles, he saw Danielle coming along the old road. He allowed himself to appear, as if he had not been in concealment.

Danielle seemed completely calm. "I thought I'd find you," she said. "You heard me make the date with Bill. And—coming back—I saw where somebody had walked up along the trail a ways. I let Bill go—and started looking for you—though I must say, you have a good memory."

He nodded calmly. "Yeah. I followed you."

"Why? Why did you listen to my call?"

He studied her. No use explaining that accident and a desire to satisfy his aunt were largely responsible for his first act of eavesdropping. No use, indeed, of trying to explain or apologize for anything—in Danielle's case. "I felt in the mood," he said.

She frowned. "What sort of oaf are you, anyway? Maybe the psychiatrists ought to have a shot at you."

He ignored that. He asked, "You been around here—in these woods—in the last twenty-four hours?"

"I live here," she answered. "I'm a dryad."

"I mean—seriously. When did you and your father get up here?"

"Yesterday afternoon," she answered. "Anything else? Do you want to walk back to the clubhouse with me?"

"Maybe. Do you know how to make a deadfall?"

"Deadfall? I don't even know—oh! A trap! No."

"Who does—around here?"

"Look, ducky. It's been over ten years since I was a Girl Scout. What about a deadfall?"

Aggie pointed. "There's one back yonder about a hundred yards. A big, powerful one, that was counterbalanced with rocks. Jim Calder's in it—and he's dead."

Periodic Inspections Are Urged by Hine Garage

If you are a war worker, hauling loads, remember it's your responsibility to keep your car in good running condition.

As a Ford agency it's our responsibility to have trained mechanics and to be able to supply genuine factory parts for all makes of cars.

H. I. Hine of the Hine Motor Co., W. State st.

Because the need for transportation is so urgent few garages find it necessary to worry about getting business, it's a case of encouraging motorists to do what they should be doing, using as little time of the mechanics as possible.

Hine believes that the cheapest way for any motorist is to have regular inspections made.

An inspection by a competent mechanic, reveals, before real damage takes place the many conditions that do constantly develop with any automobile. And as a rule the expense and time required to make the minor repairs or adjustments is very little, while even a few days

Realign Your Automobile Wheels At Klein Garage

Most motorists know that during cold weather few tires blow out because the tires heat much less during cold weather.

Many, however, overlook the fact that right now if they are careless in keeping tires correctly inflated they are setting the stage for trouble mighty soon after hot weather arrives.

Taking care of tires every day is the only way to get the full mileage built into them. Now that thousands of tires have been recapped or retreaded extra attention must be given. The retreading or even repairing of any kind of a casing is almost certain to cause it to be out of balance and if it is out of balance you may be certain it is wearing very fast.

To know that all wheels are in correct balance is the only way to get full mileage. This can be done with very little trouble in the Salem district. Matt Klein, who operates a specialized garage at 813 Newgarden st., has two special machines that tell to the smallest degree if the wheel is out of balance.

Flowers Are Ideal Gift For the Sick, Shut-Ins

Remembering the sick, shut-in, and the aged has always been a pleasure to most of us.

The little attentions given the unfortunate surely do repay the giver. To know others are wishing you well helps the sick to fight their ailment, it gives strength and brushes away loneliness.

Flowers have for centuries been an accepted medium for all occasions, cut or potted blooms do with their beauty and fragrance lighten the burden of the sick. Today many gifts aside from flowers answer much the same purpose.

Endres-Gross Florists, State st. and Penn ave., carry in stock many gift items that are appropriate and their complete line of Hallmark gift cards are designed to meet every possible occasion where just the right sentiment is necessary.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Danielle tossed her head. "May-be—that's what I want to make! Nobody in this world has spared my feelings! Or my mother's—"

"You don't blame me for what my father did!"

"I'm bored. I've been engaged over and over—and I never loved one of them. Nobody worries about my feelings. Danielle can take care of herself! That's how they think."

"You certainly never were—"

There was a trace of humor in his voice—"exactly a dependent dame."

"No. Now look at me! I'm almost twenty-eight. It seems that I can't have affection. Men get scared of me. When I was a kid—I always imagined a man would come along who would tell me what to do and where to get off. Nobody did. Nobody can. I've been gyped. Maybe I'm not meant for affection. But I certainly think I'm entitled to excitement—anyhow. Fun. I used to think you were pretty swell—when you played football—and later, if having fun means trouble for people—then, there's going to be trouble!"

"A nice, wholesome attitude."

"And it's just the beginning! I'm going to wreck homes and influence people—for the worse. Indian Stones is a monument to hypocrisy. One more generation, and everybody in it will be as dead and dried up as Aggie Plum!"

There was a great deal more of that sort of conversation.

The sun settled behind the hills that rimmed Indian Stones and its two lakes. Six-forty-five passed—and seven. The two people were so engrossed that Aggie was able to move closer and to part the branches in order to look at them. A reddish glint of sunset shone on Danielle's smooth hair and silhouetted her vivid profile. It illuminated Bill Calder, lounging against a boulder, downcast, tormented. Aggie felt sorry for him; what the girl was doing seemed coldly deliberate. As if she were merely trying to keep him there as long as possible. That thought became so clear to Aggie that he wondered what it could mean. At last, however, Bill tore himself away and hurried down the trail.

Again, Aggie slipped into the weeds and started back by a straighter, shorter route. He was determined to reach the club ahead of them. He took a series of steep rock ledges with the facility of a chamois. He hurried along under a growth of white pines. In his brain, recollection unfolded a map imprinted during his youth. There would be a brook with easy going for a while. Then a cut through a narrow burned area to another old road which would come out behind the Patton place.

He followed a track of grass bleached wan by shade—a remnant from the time when the road had been more open. Then he plunged into a dense thicket—and stopped just before he emerged on the other side.

He looked at the ground. What held his attention would have terrified most persons, in that gray and silent place. But Aggie was not in the least frightened. Startled—and no more. He pursed his lips and whistled one low, soft note.

Two logs lay across the vestigial road—one on top of the other. Long, vertical stakes held them together—stakes that had guided the upper log to drop on the lower. Beyond the logs lay trigger, lever and bald—bread and honey, in this case. There were ants busy now in the honey. It was a deadfall—a big one—of a size suitable for bear. But the top log had closed, like the blade of a giant scissors, on a man. The man was Jim Calder.

There was nothing new about the spectacle of death for Aggie Plum. In his researches among the ruins of many civilizations, he'd seen the remains of myriad deaths, violent and peaceful. ### Jayne Ingram Is Bride Of Navy Officer

Announcement has been made here of the recent wedding of Miss Jayne Ingram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Ingram of New Kensington, Pa., formerly of Salem, to Ensign Jack D. Remaley, U.S.N.R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben D. Remaley of Oakmont, Pa.

Dr. Edward L. Boettcher officiated at the ceremony at the bride's home which was followed by a reception.

The bride wore a grey street dress with black accessories and orchid corsage.

The couple left during the evening by plane for Los Angeles where they will make their home.

Mrs. Remaley attended Ohio Wesleyan university and Carnegie Institute of Technology. She has been employed for the last two years as a laboratory assistant by the Aluminum Research Laboratories.

Ensign Remaley graduated from Pennsylvania State college in 1942, and was employed by the American Magnesium Corp. in Bridgeport, Conn., before his enlistment. He recently concluded several months duty in the South Pacific.

Household Hints

Bright left-over bits of wool can be used to embroider the brim of a felt hat to match your latest sweater.

Since white fabric gloves are much cheaper than colored ones, get a small package of dye and tint them to match a costume.

A blackboard in the kitchen is handy for keeping a list of things you need. You can jot down when you started the roast, etc.

Run a piece of stale bread through the meat grinder after you have used it to force out meat particles.

When serving pudding and pies put a shaker of equal parts of ground allspice, cloves, mace and nutmeg on the table.

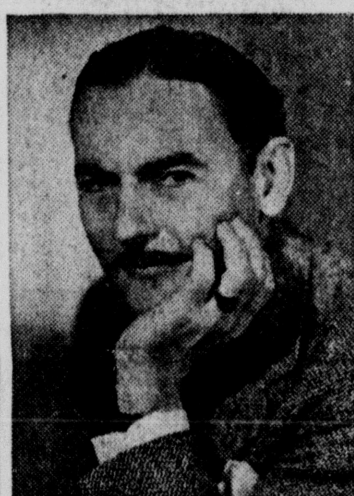

A cake is done when it shrinks from the sides of the pan or springs back when touched lightly with the finger.

Bridal Gown With a Future

Practical-minded brides and bridesmaids, who want to wear their wedding finery long after the rice and old shoes have been swept away, will welcome the new collection of gowns with a future created for a recent Bridal Clinic fashion show. ## Soil Conservation Is Held Solution To Ohio Water Problem

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29.—At least 25 Ohio cities must find new sources of water if they are to maintain their industrial growth, Wilber Stout, state geologist and chairman of the Ohio water supply board, declares.

Either decentralization of industry in Ohio or tapping of new water supplies is necessary to save the state's dwindling supply, he warns.

Virtual exhaustion of water in Columbus last week and a severe water shortage in Lima this month emphasized Ohio's drought which began in 1930.

Dayton and Columbus have reached their maximum industrial growth unless more water is found, Stout said in an interview. Canton, Cincinnati, Springfield, and the entire Miami valley also must find new water sources, he added.

Stout advocated "the scattering of industries" to prevent severe water shortage in one city or another and more careful use of water by industries.

"The steel mills at Youngstown use 800 million gallons of water a day, but they use the water over and over," Stout explained.

How can Ohio combat effects of the long-time drought?

"Soil conservation," Stout urged. "Contour plowing, strip furrowing on rougher lands, terracing, planting of cover crops such as grasses, and highly humus soil which has a high water capacity. Wet peat, for example, is three times its own weight in water. Forest land is necessary."

"Ohio's two big problems are water conservation and soil conservation and they are interlocking."

Stout recommended development of a field of new wells in the center of the Newark deep stage drainage line and construction of salt traps at the headwaters of the Scioto river to solve Columbus' water shortage.

Protest Shipment Of U. S. Newsprint For Use In France

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Two members of a house committee which investigated the paper shortage in the United States have filed protest with the State department against sending American newsprint to France.

Chairman Boren (D., Okla.) and Rep. Brown (R., Ohio) said last night they had written Secretary of State Stettinius, calling attention to published reports that 5,000 tons of newspaper was to be sent to France "within the month" and asked:

"Why should France appeal to us—three thousand miles away—for pulp and paper when the world's largest glut of pulp and paper capacity is right next door in Sweden, Finland and Russia?"

Newsprint here is "in critically short supply," the congressmen said, quoting a Commerce department report estimating a U. S. "paper shortage of 'almost 4,000,000 tons of paper the first year after victory in Europe'."

They wrote that the shipments to France from the United States would not only dip into this country's meager supply, but would tie up shipping facilities necessary to the war. They said:

Russia should be able to ship out of Archangel and Petsamo to the north and from the Black sea into the Mediterranean to the south and satisfy those European demands.

"We respectfully request that you bring this situation to the attention of the Russian government."

State department officials said the protest had not been received.

They commented that in the past they have explained to newspaper publishers that the Skagerrak route from Scandinavia is still closed, that Russia does not have an excess of newsprint, and that if it did the shipping problem would be difficult.

Reps. Boren and Brown said they also told the secretary of state:

"Just prior to the war France was becoming more and more self-sufficient in meeting her own paper requirements by expanding her pulp and paper industry."

"It is our understanding that French pulp and paper producing facilities are more or less intact."

Other guests included Mrs. Vernon Long of Buffalo, Mrs. Robert Bradley and Nancy of Salem, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bradley and Bonnie Lou of Akron.

Mrs. William Marshall and son Billy are visiting William Marshall S. C. at Norfolk, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wang entertained at dinner recently honoring Charles L. Sell, MM 3 C, home on furlough after serving 13 months overseas, and Glenn E. Bradley, MM 3 C, home on leave from Camp Pendleton. Both are Salem boys. This is their first meeting since entering the service. Bradley has served in the Pacific area where he was injured in an accident on board ship last May. He is a brother of Mrs. Wang.

Miss Marilyn Bradley visited over the weekend with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Charlton of Salem.

Gives Demonstration For New Garden Club

Miss Erma Ramseyer, county home demonstration agent, gave a demonstration on sewing at the meeting of the New Garden Merry Matrons club Friday at the home of Mrs. Donald Smith at New Garden.

Guests included Miss Ramseyer, Miss Edna Mae Cox of Crawford county, Miss Rosa Connell, Mrs. Jewell Hall and children.

The Feb. 16 meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Howard Baker. Valentines will be exchanged by "secret pals."

A dark dress can be revived for spring by adding big patch pockets of a flower or polka dot print.

STOMACH YIELDS INCHES OF GAS!

"I was so full of gas I was afraid I'd burst. Sour, bitter substance rose up in my throat. I got ERB-HELP and I praise Erb-Help to the sky. This is an actual testimonial from a man living right here in Salem."

It's Cold — Even At College

These co-eds of Ohio State university, Columbus, had a cool time of it when the power facilities broke down, adding to the woes of college officials already faced with perhaps colder times ahead because of the coal shortage. Left to right, the co-eds are Mary Herbel, Alice Clawson, Pat Sullivan, shivering over cold radiator.

Protest Shipment Of U. S. Newsprint For Use In France

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Two members of a house committee which investigated the paper shortage in the United States have filed protest with the State department against sending American newsprint to France.

Chairman Boren (D., Okla.) and Rep. Brown (R., Ohio) said last night they had written Secretary of State Stettinius, calling attention to published reports that 5,000 tons of newsprint was to be sent to France "within the month" and asked:

"Why should France appeal to us—three thousand miles away—for pulp and paper when the world's largest glut of pulp and paper capacity is right next door in Sweden, Finland and Russia?"

Newsprint here is "in critically short supply," the congressmen said, quoting a Commerce department report estimating a U. S. paper shortage of "almost 4,000,000 tons of paper the first year after victory in Europe."

They wrote that the shipments to France from the United States would not only dip into this country's meager supply, but would tie up shipping facilities necessary to the war. They said:

Russia should be able to ship out of Archangel and Petsamo to the north and from the Black sea into the Mediterranean to the south and satisfy those European demands.

"We respectfully request that you bring this situation to the attention of the Russian government."

State department officials said the protest had not been received.

They commented that in the past they have explained to newspaper publishers that the Skagerrak route from Scandinavia is still closed, that Russia does not have an excess of newsprint, and that if it did the shipping problem would be difficult.

Reps. Boren and Brown said they also told the secretary of state: "Just prior to the war France was becoming more and more self-sufficient in meeting her own paper requirements by expanding her pulp and paper industry."

"It is our understanding that French pulp and paper producing facilities are more or less intact."

Journalist Succumbs

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Carr V. Van Ande, 33, retired managing editor of the New York Times whose scholarship and instinct for news made him a giant of American journalism, died of a heart attack at his home here last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wang entertained at dinner recently honoring Charles L. Sell, MM 3 C, home on furlough after serving 13 months overseas, and Glenn E. Bradley, MM 3 C, home on leave from Camp Pendleton. Both are Salem boys. This is their first meeting since entering the service. ## Farm Loans for Veterans Explained At Meeting

A training meeting to set up machinery for certifying guarantee on agricultural loans to World War I veterans as provided for in the Servicemen's Readjustment act, the "G. I. Bill of Rights," was held in Wooster on Jan. 24 for this area including Holmes, Wayne, Medina, Lorain, Stark and Columbiana counties.

Attending the meeting from Columbiana county were Harold Raley, Hanoverton, and Mrs. Dorothy Fennimore Saltville, members of the present FSA committee which has been named by the secretary of agriculture as the certifying committee.

Also attending the meeting was Leonard S. Firestone, Lisbon who attended as veteran representative.

Salem Faces Rejuvenated Alliance Team Here Tomorrow

Seeking Second Victory Over Aviators As Brian Plays Last Home Game

SALEM	POSITION	ALLIANCE
Mutt Schaeffer	Forward	Bud Tuttle
Ray Kelly	Forward	Jack Bowman
Walt Brian	Center	Neil Maple
Francis Lanney	Guard	Dick Albaugh
Jim Appedisian	Guard	Paul Duffy

Salem High's Quakers are slated to meet Alliance, a team they defeated 37-28 earlier this season, in the local gym tomorrow evening, but the situation is an entirely changed one since the teams last met.

When Salem journeyed to Alliance Jan. 5, Alliance had three lettermen to count on. Now they have none. Mid-year graduation cleaned the squad of veterans about a week ago and the starting lineup that faced Salem before will be completely altered this time.

So far this season the Aviators have had nothing but tough luck. In eleven times out they have been beaten 10, and all have been in a row since the opener.

Opening the season with a defeat of Wadsworth, 39-33, the Alliance crew went on down the line to lose by these scores: Memorial, 32-28; Sebring, 29-21; Timken, 71-47; East Liverpool, 77-24; McKinley, 38-31; Salem, 37-28; Barberton 60-36; Massillon 48-30; South 41-27 and Warren last Friday, 44-26.

The only game the rejuvenated lineup has played is the Warren game and reports have it that the squad turns in a better ball-handling exhibition.

The Warren game would indicate that the contest here tomorrow should be a tough one. Warren knocked the Quakers off just a week ago 42-28, almost an identical comparison.

There's always that one big "if" to consider when a basketball team goes into action against a poorer outfit, equipped with more experience, a better record and too much confidence.

"If" that outfit, which tomorrow will be Alliance, should get a hot night, and they're long overdue—it might be too bad for the Quakers.

To replace the veterans he has lost, Coach Marcus Covert has done a lot of switching. He now starts Bud Tuttle and Jack Bowman at the forwards. Neil Maple at center, and Dick Albaugh and Paul Duffy on guards.

This outfit has proven more aggressive and a good bit faster, the Alliance coach says, and he believes they will give Salem a tougher test than in the last meeting on the Mount Union floor.

Salem's starting lineup will include the same group that started the Akron Kenmore game. Francis Lanney and Jim Appedisian will be in at guards on the tip-off, but Lanney will move down under basket when ball handling begins. Walt Brian, starter at center, will shift back to guard on offense and Mutt Schaeffer and Ray Kelly will be in at forwards.

Norm Smith, who turned in a top game against Akron, will undoubtedly see a lot of action and may start at forward.

The game here tomorrow will be the home floor "swan song" of Walter Brian, who has been pounding the Salem boards as a varsity man for three years.

Brian, slated to go into the service next Monday, will play his last home game tomorrow. A veteran with a year more experience than most varsity men claim, Brian has turned in some of the best basketball seen here in years.

His ball handling is surpassed only by the ease and grace of his accurate shooting. His layup shots, from anywhere on the floor, have just the right English, just the right push and polish to mark him as a target for any opponent's defensive maneuvers.

Although a spotted man in nearly every game he has played, Brian has averaged 12 points a game in some 53 varsity tries—a total of more than 600 points in three years. His final high school exhibition will be at East Liverpool on Friday night.

Coach Miller is drilling his charges with emphasis this week, for the Alliance and East Liverpool games—coming in the same week—are all-important to Quaker fandom. A double victory would help to soothe the Warren loss a week ago.

A reserve contest will begin at 7:30 and the varsity will play at 8:45.

Potters Take Win Over Bridgeport

BRIDGEPORT, Jan. 29 — After spotting the opposition 16 points, East Liverpool sprinted to a defeat, Bridgeport, 47-46, here Saturday.

The home boys held an 18-7 first period and a 28-20 half advantage. The visiting athletes knotted the count, 35-all, in the third.

Indianapolis Retains Hockey League Rating

(By Associated Press)

Indianapolis nearly fell out of first place in the Western division of the American Hockey league over the weekend. But the Caps held for the top by Cleveland Saturday, regained the leadership last night by beating St. Louis, 4-1, while the Browns were blanked by Providence, 2-0.

Buffalo and Hershey, top clubs in the Eastern division, waged a bitter struggle before 8,142 at Buffalo

AKRON AND OHIO STATE SHARE SPOTLIGHT IN WEEK'S COLLEGE BASKETBALL SCHEDULE

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29. — Akron's once-beaten Zippers will head back into the east this week in an effort to add to their growing college basketball reputation.

Akron's game with Brooklyn at Boston on Wednesday night rates along with Ohio State's return to the basketball wars as the high spot of the week's 21-game program.

The Bucks, idle since last Monday night, will clash with Wisconsin here Saturday night. Since their last game they have moved into a tie with Iowa for first place in the Western conference as a result of the Hawkeyes' defeat by Illinois.

Akron's tilt with Brooklyn will be the Zippers' third start against big time eastern competition. They were nosed out by St. John of Brooklyn and whipped Canisius. That defeat by St. John was the only setback in Akron's 13 games.

Here is the week's schedule:

Byrd Beats Nelson By Stroke In Texas

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Jan. 29.—Golf's touring professionals, winding up their ninth tournament of the winter campaign, departed for Corpus Christi today with Byron Nelson well out in front in money earned but with the title of the Texas open—and the $1,000 that went with it—resting with Sammy Byrd.

Byrd bettered the record low score for this tournament—a 271 hung up by E. J. (Dutch) Harrison in 1939—by three strokes yesterday as he came in with a 68 and a 66 for the last two rounds compared to 68 and 68 for Nelson. Byrd's total was 268 and Nelson had 269.

Nelson, golf's leading money-winner in 1944 with more than $40,000 in War bonds, is repeating the trick this year. In four tournaments since Jan. 1, Nelson has rolled up $4,799 in bonds (maturity value). Sam Snead, who had to quit the tour last week because of a back ailment, is second with $3,446 and Harold (Jug) McSpaden is next with $3,399.

Byrd's $1,333 (maturity) value in War bonds from the open here put him in fourth place with earnings of $3,344.

The board of control of the Ohio High School Athletic association completed the following arrangements Saturday:

Salem Faces Rejuvenated Alliance Team Here Tomorrow

Seeking Second Victory Over Aviators As Brian Plays Last Home Game

SALEM	POSITION	ALLIANCE
Matt Schaeffer	Forward	Bud Tuttle
Ray Kelly	Forward	Jack Bowman
Walt Brian	Center	Neil Maple
Francis Lanney	Guard	Dick Albaugh
Jim Appeduan	Guard	Paul Duffy

Salem High's Quakers are slated to meet Alliance, a team they defeated 37-28 earlier this season, in the local gym tomorrow evening, but the situation is an entirely changed one since the teams last met.

When Salem journeyed to Alliance Jan. 5, Alliance had three letter-men to count on. Now they have none. Mid-year graduation cleared the squad of veterans about a week ago and the starting lineup that faced Salem before will be completely altered this time.

So far this season the Aviators have had nothing but tough luck. In eleven times out they have been beaten 10, and all have been in a row since the opener.

Opening the season with a defeat of Wadsworth, 39-33, the Alliance crew went down the line to lose by these scores: Memorial, 32-28; Sebring, 29-21; Timken, 71-47; East Liverpool, 77-24; McKinley, 38-31; Salem, 37-28; Barberton 60-36; Massillon 48-30; South 41-27 and Warren last Friday, 44-26.

The only game the rejuvenated lineup has played is the Warren game and reports have it that the squad turns in a better ball-handling exhibition.

The Warren game would indicate that the contest here tomorrow should be a tough one. Warren knocked the Quakers off just a week ago 43-28, almost an identical comparison.

There's always that one big "if" to consider when a basketball team goes into action against a poorer outfit, equipped with more experience, a better record and too much confidence.

"If" that outfit, which tomorrow will be Alliance, should get a hot night, and they're long overdue—it might be too bad for the Quakers.

To replace the veterans he has lost, Coach Marcus Covert has done a lot of switching. He now starts Bud Tuttle and Jack Bowman at the forwards, Neil Maple at center, and Dick Albaugh and Paul Duffy on guards.

This outfit has proven more aggressive and a good bit faster. Coach Covert says, and he believes they will give Salem a tougher test than in the last meeting on the Mount Union floor.

Salem's starting lineup will include the same group that started the Akron Kenmore game. Francis Lanney and Jim Appeduan will be in at guards on the tip-off, but Lanney will move down under basket when ball handling begins. Walt Brian, starter at center, will shift back to guard on offense.

Norm Smith, who turned in a top game against Akron, will undoubtedly see a lot of action and may start at forward.

The game here tomorrow will be the home floor "saw song" of Walter Brian, who has been pounding the Salem boards as a varsity man for three years.

Brian, slated to go into the service next Monday, will play his last home game tomorrow. A veteran with a year more experience than most varsity men claim, Brian has turned in some of the best basketball seen here in years.

His ball handling is surpassed only by the ease and grace of his accurate shooting. His layup shots, from anywhere on the floor, have just the right English, just the right push and polish to mark him as a target for any opponent's defensive maneuvers.

Although a spotted man in nearly every game he has played, Brian has averaged 12 points a game in some 53 varsity tries—a total of more than 600 points in three years.

His final high school exhibition will be at East Liverpool on Friday night.

Coach Miller is drilling his charges with emphasis this week for the Alliance and East Liverpool games—coming in the same week—are all-important to Quaker fandom. A double victory would help to soothe over the Warren loss a week ago.

A reserve contest will begin at 7:30 and the varsity will play at 8:45.

Potters Take Win Over Bridgeport

BRIDGEPORT, Jan. 29.—After spotting the opposition 16 points, East Liverpool spurted to defeat Bridgeport, 47-46, here Saturday.

The home boys held an 18-7 first period and a 28-20 half advantage. The visiting athletes knotted the count, 35-35, in the third.

Indianapolis Retains Hockey League Rating

(By Associated Press)

Indianapolis nearly fell out of first place in the Western division of the American Hockey league over the weekend. But the Caps tied for the top by Cleveland Saturday, regained the leadership last night by beating St. Louis, 4-1, while the Barons were blanked by Providence, 2-0.

Buffalo and Hershey, top clubs in the Eastern division, waged a bitter struggle before Buffalo with the Bruins winning, 3 to 2.

MICKEY MCGUIRES BEGIN 2ND ROUND

Fourth St., Winner In Four Of Five, Beaten In First Game This Trip

Columbia defeated Reilly 15-13. Prospect took a beating from McKinley 27-13 and St. Paul's downed Fourth street 22-11 in Mickey McGuire second round openers Saturday afternoon at the Memorial building.

The upset of the day occurred when a victory starved McKinley crew got red-hot to knock off the Prospect outfit for their first win of the season. St. Paul's served notice they will be tough in first round playoffs by downing Fourth street, also in the playoffs, with ease.

Columbia, St. Paul and Fourth Street—now tied—will start their first round playoff at 6:30 tonight at the Memorial building, with Fourth Street playing St. Paul. The winner of this game will clash with Columbia Street cagers at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

AKRON AND OHIO STATE SHARE SPOTLIGHT IN WEEK'S COLLEGE BASKETBALL SCHEDULE

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29.—Akron's once-beaten Zippers will head back into the east this week in an effort to add to their growing college basketball reputation.

Akron's game with Brooklyn at Boston on Wednesday night rates along with Ohio State's return to the basketball wars as the high spot of the week's 21-game program.

The Bucks, idle since last Monday night, will clash with Wisconsin here Saturday night. Since their last game they have moved into a tie with Iowa for first place in the Western conference as a result of the Hawkeyes' defeat by Illinois.

Akron's tilt with Brooklyn will be the Zippers' third start against big time eastern competition. They were nosed out by St. John of Brooklyn and whipped Canisius. That defeat by St. John was the only setback in Akron's 13 games.

Here is the week's schedule:

Tonight—Fletcher General hospital at Muskingum. Tuesday—Ohio State at Otterbein at Denison at Bowling Green; Heidelberg at Camp Perry. Akron vs St. John of Brooklyn at Boston; Gannon at Kent State at Akron; Rio Grande at Millard. Friday—Wooster at Baldwin-Wallace; Rio Grande at Pikesville (Ky.).

Saturday—Miami at Ohio University; Otterbein at Heidelberg; Wisconsin at Ohio State; Ohio Wesleyan at Oberlin; Cleveland Naval at Ashland; Kenyon at Capital; Carnegie Tech at Case; Toledo at Albion; Marshall at Cincinnati; Kent State at Akron; Rio Grande at Pikesville (Ky.); Newark Owens-Corning Glass at Denison.

Eliminate Tie

Bowling Green and Akron regarded the one-two positions Saturday night on the over-all standings among Ohio's colleges when Muskingum's Muskies pinned a 44 to 40 defeat on Wittenberg which had won its first six games in a row.

The defeat also knocked the Lutherans out of a tie with Akron and Toledo for first place in the Ohio conference. Muskingum had won only three of seven games but bumped off a team that seemed headed toward at least a tie for the Ohio conference championship was nothing new for the Muskies. They did the same thing to Wooster four years ago and to Capital two years ago.

Bowling Green made its season record read 14 won and one lost with an easy 70 to 48 conquest of Baldwin-Wallace.

Bowling Green thus became the first Ohio team to pass the 1,000 point total for the season and the Bee-Gees are hitting it up at 68-points-a-game pace.

In other games Saturday night Capital crushed Kenyon, 65 to 24, and Ohio Wesleyan crushed Case, 59 to 35.

Akron Basketball Coach
(Written for NEA Service)

One of the greatest thrills came when my West High team won the state scholastic basketball championship at Columbus in 1932. I moved in there as head coach in 1928 and my kids got into the Ohio tournament five consecutive years.

Since I came to Akron U. in 1940 I've had a lot of pleasure seeing my Zippers win 56 and lose only 18 for a .756 mark and when they won 18 in the 1942-43 season to beat the all-time Akron record for victories in one season.

But every coaching day is a new thrill. And I still get my biggest kick every time I see Fritz Nagy, our star forward, in action.

Alumni Beats Lisbon

LISBON, Jan. 29.—Lisbon High's varsity dropped a 34-32 decision to the Alumni here Saturday.

Pennier's 16 points featured for the post grads while Robinson starred for the losers.

he earns but what he does in the home and outside the school with what he has learned in the classroom."

Miss Kirk warned parents against placing too much emphasis on grades, for, she explained, some students can "earn" to make high marks and still not know much. She also discouraged the award of money or other gifts for high grades as giving "the student a false sense of values and frequently encouraging cheating."

Col. Roosevelt Breaks In News Again; Holds Fast Train One Hour

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Jan. 29—Union Pacific's crack steamliner, the City of Los Angeles, has made up the hour and seven minutes lost when it was held here Saturday night to permit Col. James Roosevelt and his wife to make connections, but it remained undecided today who asked that the train be delayed.

The Roosevelts arrived in Chicago from Washington on Pennsylvania's Manhattan Limited, which was delayed more than six hours by bad weather.

E. W. Everson, assistant station master of the Chicago and Northwestern, where the train is made up, said he received the request to hold the train in a telegram bearing James Roosevelt's name.

Col. Roosevelt, in Salt Lake City where the train arrived on schedule last night, said "I didn't ask to have the train held. It must have been the conductor of the Manhattan Limited that asked for it to be held."

The conductor, G. W. Kleinfelter of Fort Wayne, Ind., reported to Pennsylvania officials he had sent no telegram and that he was not aware Col. Roosevelt was a passenger, representatives of the read said.

Pullman company officials could not be reached to determine if the request for delay was made by a Pullman conductor.

Everson said the delaying of the train departure was "not common but not unusual."

"It has been done several times in the past year and three or four times in the past six months," he said. "If a representative of a big firm on government business or a government official must make the connection we consider holding the departure."

"If it had been any other Army, Navy or Marine high officer making the request, we would have done the same thing."

Parole Violator Given Return Trip To Lancaster

LISBON, Jan. 29—An East Liverpool youth, arrested Saturday by police in connection with the theft of gas coupons, candy and gum from an East Liverpool service station, was found to be a parole violator from the Boys Industrial school and Lancaster and was returned to the institution.

Two other youths, held on a charge of purse snatching, placed on probation and were given into the custody of relatives.

The model for Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" is said to have been Isabella d'Este, the marchioness of Mantua.

Yanks Advance

Initiative was reported in Allied hands everywhere along the Western front, as shown on above map, with the U. S. 3rd army advancing 20 miles in final mop-up of Ardennes salient.

Q—How many American war correspondents have been killed in this war?
A—29.

Q—How many American civilians are held by the Japs in the Philippines?
A—6,000, it is believed.

Q—How many persons in England have been killed or injured by flying bombs?
A—21,000.

Q—What nation has spent the second largest sum on the war, the U. S. having spent the largest sum?
A—Russia, about $100,000,000,000.

Q—What is the difference between a midget and a dwarf?
A—A midget's body is normal in every way except size, the smallness being a result of failure of growth-producing glands. A dwarf is misshapen, usually with abnormally short legs.

Q—How much do Americans spend on medical care and related services?
A—About 4 per cent of the national income.

Q—What has war cost the Allies so far?
A—Around $500,000,000,000, nearly half being U. S. expenditures.

Q—What has war cost the Allies so far?
A—Around $500,000,000,000, nearly half being U. S. expenditures.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

The Red armies can keep up the pace of their cyclic offensive without pausing for a breather. They have been going since Jan. 12 at a pace which is one of the rarest of military history, and under normal circumstances they would be expected to slow down for a bit.

They may have got ahead of their main supplies in their wild race. They may need a little time to bring up reserves for the final assault.

Also important is the fact that the Russians have to protect both flanks of their great battleline, which extends from the Baltic sea down to Hungary. It's true they virtually have neutralized the big German force in East Prussia, and have gone far towards nullifying the danger from a German counter-thrust in the south. Still, until those German armies have been annihilated they remain a potential menace which cannot be disregarded by the Russian forces advancing in the center.

If the Russians do slacken up and so give the Nazis a little respite to man their defenses it will draw the battle out some. Fierce fighting is still in prospect.

HOW NAZI BULGE WAS DEFLATED

STEP BY STEP the map above details the highlights of the great German counter-offensive and its collapse. And, day-by-day, the flattening of the bulge continues with American forces blasting the Germans back toward the Rhine. Assaults by the 1st Army from strategic Houffalize and from the 2nd Army in the north have practically insured the fall of St. Vith and the early return of Von Rundstedt's battered forces back to the starting point of the short-lived smash. ## LEAVES FROM A WAR CORRESPONDENT'S NOTEBOOK

by Hal Boyle

WITH THE NINTH INFANTRY DIVISION—When one anti-aircraft unit was cut off by heavy snows and ran out of supplies it didn't call on the air force to parachute fresh supplies—it just mished them in with ox teams.

The "provisional supply train" of the 376th anti-aircraft battalion consisted of two ox-drawn carts.

Ranking man on the "ox team special express" was Staff Sgt. Albert Ricci of Brooklyn. "Some of the guys howl and jeer when our frontier days convoy goes by," he said, "but we get the cow and the mail and look at the cow and tires we save."

When Pvt. Henry Hartwig woke up in a hospital after a jeep accident he had to talk fast to convince doctors he was not a prisoner or a German soldier in disguise.

He has a marked German accent and his tag was "IPW."

Hartwig finally convinced the authorities that he came from New York City and that his dogtag meant "interrogator of prisoners of war," not "one prisoner of war."

A "going home" pool has been started by the 26th field artillery battalion's service battery. Each man puts in 50 cents a week and the lucky soldier selected to go home for a 30-day rest under the new European theater of operations furlough plan takes pot with him.

One of the things that burns up ack-ack outfits is to shoot down a plane—and then have some other unit claim credit for a share in the kill.

Recently an ME-109 came in low over the 400mm ack-ack gun of Sgt. Hardwick Cepelink. He was hit just in front of the cockpit and crashed about half a mile away. The enemy flyer parachuted into the woods only a couple of hundred yards from the gun which had roused him down.

Dispatching two members of his crew to the scene of the crash Sgt. Cepelink, whose home is in Albert, W. Va., took off like a bloodhound to find the enemy pilot.

A few minutes later his platoon officer found the sergeant bending over the injured German pilot.

"What are you doing?" he asked. "We've shot down so many planes which other outfits have got credit

Religion May Need Selling Job, Is College's Belief

AP Newsfeatures

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—A rangy, red-haired clergyman is making a two-year study to find out whether the same intangible factor that sells lipstick and lace also will sell religion.

The study, approved by the board of directors of the Presbyterian Theological seminary of Kentucky, founded in 1901, has been organized by Dr. W. A. Benfield, Jr., professor of Hebrew and Old Testament at the institution.

Dr. Benfield regards the program as a concentrated survey into the fields of advertising and salesmanship to try to discover the fundamental principles of such selling and to determine if such principles could be transferred to religion and applied in church programs, including the sermon and the organization of the church.

A Businesslike Poll
"The executive advertising manager bases his progress to a large extent on the understanding of the general public," Dr. Benfield said, a factor which he contends the church has largely overlooked. The tall, deep-voiced theologian, former pastor of the Beechmont church in Lexington, Ky., says the study is an entirely unique approach to theological education.

Dr. Benfield considers the minister a poor salesman of religion, because, he said, the clergyman uses "a vocabulary philosophically above his congregation."

Began a short time ago, the study will extend over two years. Dr. Benfield will visit college campuses to determine why students seemingly are not interested in church affairs. He will investigate those churches with successful programs in use; he will study through the use of questionnaires, the various reactions of both churchgoers and non-participants.

At the same time, Dr. Benfield will make complete and detailed studies of sales training programs at leading manufacturing companies and advertising firms in America. He recently returned from New York where he had 29 interviews with influential business leaders within two weeks.
